(22 March 2025)

About the Day

This year's World Water Day, celebrated on March 22, 2025, focuses on “Glacier Preservation” – highlighting the critical role glaciers play in sustaining global water resources. As natural reservoirs, glaciers supply freshwater to billions, but they are rapidly disappearing due to climate change. Please join us in raising awareness and taking action to protect these vital ice giants for future generations. Together, we can ensure a sustainable water future for all.
